👻🍞 THE GHOST'S PRIMARY-SOURCE ARCHIVE

A records-only look at stock-trade reports filed by members of Congress in 2025 and 2026, in two parts: The Ghost's TV Politicians, the 12 most visible members by a stated test, and The Ledger, other members found filing late. Every card links the official filing first. By The Ghost.

> Highlighting, not accusing. A late report is a missed disclosure deadline. It is not evidence of insider trading, and nothing on this page claims a crime. Many of these trades were made by spouses or outside managers, and the members' own explanations are included.

Congress at a glance

Congress has 535 voting members (435 House, 100 Senate) plus 6 non-voting House delegates. This report covers 36 members: 12 TV Politicians and 24 in The Ledger. That is 35 sitting voting members, about 6.5 percent of Congress, plus one former senator.

Chamber	Seats	Covered here	TV Politicians	The Ledger
House (voting)	435	28	6	22
House (non-voting delegates)	6	0	0	0
Senate	100	8 (7 sitting, 1 former)	6	2 (Wyden; Mullin, former)
Total	541	36	12	24

The House Clerk's member list, published Oct 1, 2026, shows two vacant House seats (FL-20 and TX-23). The 6 delegates represent DC, Puerto Rico (resident commissioner), Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands.

What the law requires

The STOCK Act (Pub. L. 112-105, 2012) requires members of Congress to report each stock, bond or other securities trade over 1,000 dollars made by themselves, a spouse or a dependent child. The report, called a Periodic Transaction Report (PTR), is due within 30 days of learning of the trade and never more than 45 days after it. Widely held mutual funds, index funds and similar excepted funds do not need a PTR.

The law requires value ranges, not exact amounts. Each trade is reported in a bracket such as 1,001 to 15,000 dollars or 1,000,001 to 5,000,000 dollars. The combined ranges in this report add the low ends and the high ends of those brackets, so the true total lies somewhere between them.

A late report carries a minimum 200 dollar fee, which the House and Senate Ethics Committees can waive. Timely reports matter because the public record is how the public and journalists can see, in near real time, whether an official's trades line up with the policy they work on.

How we checked

1. Confirmed the rule from primary text. The law (section 6 of Pub. L. 112-105), the House Ethics 2026 filing guide and the Senate Ethics financial disclosure page all state the same 30-day and 45-day clock and the 200 dollar fee.
2. Chose the TV Politicians by a stated visibility test. Split by party caucus, 6 and 6. Test 1, leadership: each caucus's top leader in each chamber (Speaker Johnson and Leader Thune; Leader Jeffries and Leader Schumer). Test 2, following: the 4 other sitting members of each caucus with the most followers on their largest X account. We checked 36 sitting members' accounts through the X API on Oct 30, 2026. Next in line: Sen. Josh Hawley (2.51 million) for Republicans and Sen. Cory Booker (4.34 million) for Democrats.
3. Verified each person is in office. House members were checked against the Clerk's member list (published Oct 1, 2026). Senators were checked against the senate.gov roster on Oct 30, 2026. People no longer in office were excluded from the TV Politicians, even with large followings.
4. Built The Ledger from reporting. We started from published reports of named late filers between July 2025 and September 2026, mostly from NOTUS and Business Insider, kept a 6 and 6 party balance, and then went to each official filing. We then scanned every House PTR the Clerk published for 2025 and 2026 (962 filings; 122 are scanned paper images our parser cannot read) and added 12 more members, again 6 and 6, whose official PTRs show trades filed past the 45-day limit. One filing marked as amended was left out because its lateness could not be confirmed.
5. Pulled the official filing. House PTRs and annual reports came from the House Clerk's 2025 and 2026 indexes and PDFs. Senate data came from public filing-index mirrors (LegiStorm, KeyVex and others that link back to the Senate eFD), because the official Senate eFD search blocks automated access.
6. Computed lateness ourselves. Days past the deadline equal the filing date minus the trade date minus 45 calendar days. That uses the outer 45-day limit, the most conservative measure. The 30-day notification clock can make more trades late, and the cards note it where it does.
7. Added up the disclosure ranges. For each filing we summed the low ends and the high ends of the reported brackets. Where a figure comes from NOTUS or another outlet rather than our own parse of the filing, the card says so.
8. Labeled every record the same way. "Documented Late Filing" means at least one trade was reported more than 45 days after it was made. "No late filings found" means trades were reported, all on time. "No individual stock trades reported" means no PTRs for 2025-2026.

Limits of this check

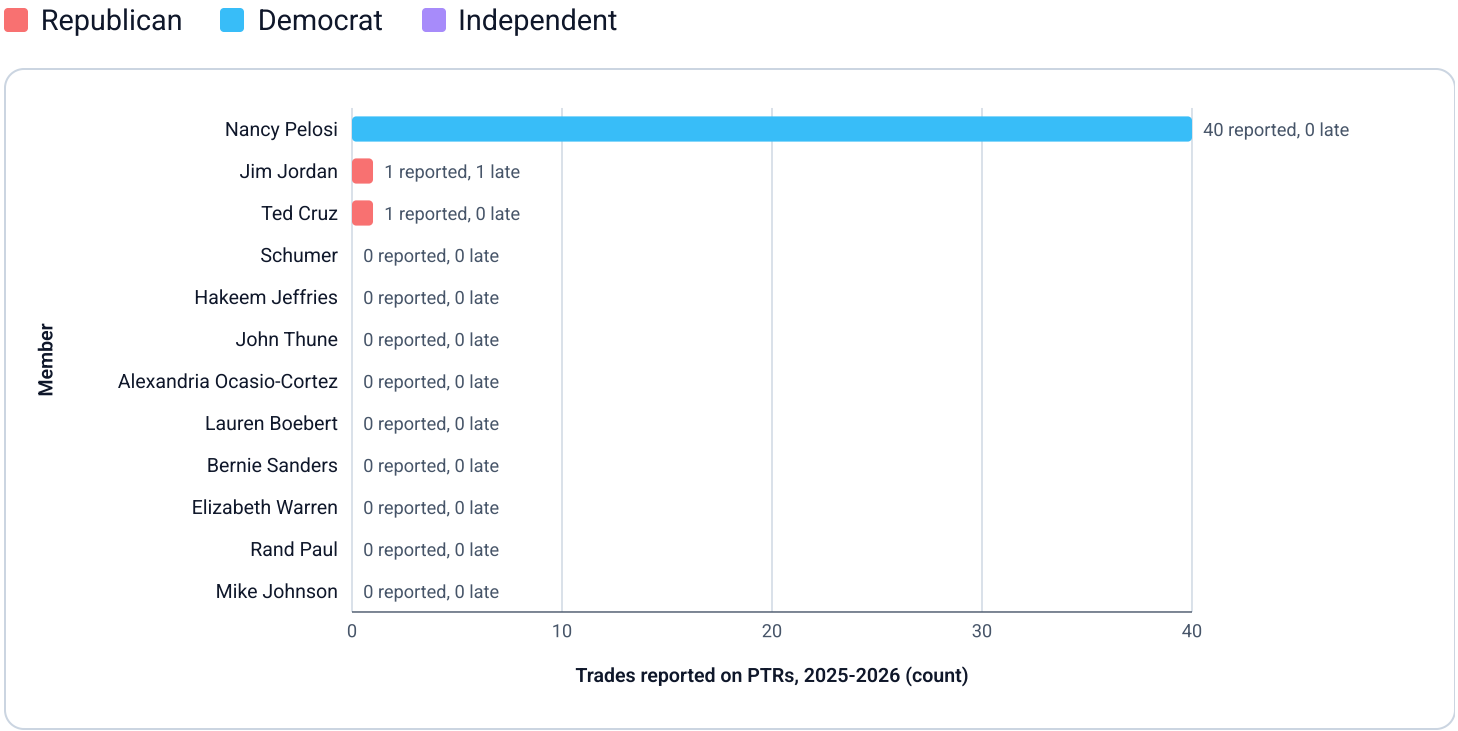

- The visibility test uses X followers because it is a public, current and checkable count. Cable and Sunday-show appearance tallies were not used, because we could not find a current, cross-network count that could be verified. Follower counts change daily, and an account's size is not a measure of news coverage.
- Dollar figures are disclosure ranges, not exact amounts, so the combined totals are wide bands.
- Senate figures rely on filing-index mirrors of the eFD, not on our own pull from the official search. Senate eFD links open after you accept the eFD terms page.

- A late fee or a late filing does not prove wrongdoing. Most of these members say an adviser, manager or spouse made the trades.
- Filings can be amended. Our counts reflect each PTR as filed on the date shown.
- Our parser reads the Clerk's PDFs, and we checked its counts against NOTUS where both exist. Where they differ, the card says which figure it uses.
- One McClain filing is a scanned paper form, and Mullin's second filing was not retrieved, so those dollar figures come from NOTUS.
- Context: across all 2025 trades, about 13.9 percent were reported after 45 days, per Equibles' analysis of the official data.

The Ghost's TV Politicians

The 12 most visible sitting members of Congress by the test above: 6 Republicans and 6 from the Democratic caucus (5 Democrats and 1 independent). Same records, same labels as The Ledger.

Result: 11 of the 12 have no late filings in 2025-2026. Rep. Jim Jordan has one late PTR, a single spouse sale of 50,001 to 100,000 dollars reported 34 days past the 45-day limit. Rep. Nancy Pelosi reported 40 transactions, all on time, with a combined reported range of about 33.5 to 145.3 million dollars.

How to read: each row is one member; the bar length is how many trades they reported on PTRs in 2025-2026, the color is party, and the label shows how many of those were late. A member with no bar reported no trades.
